Createspace, United States, 2012. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The book explains to clergy, church professionals and business people the relationship between Christianity and capitalism. Where is God in the business world? The problem: while the faith at work movement is a burgeoning phenomenon giving rise to a plethora of books for business people seeking to apply their Christian faith at their job, nowhere is there a book serving as a resource to clergy in the specific task of ministering to business people in their congregations. The solution: this book provides the missing link, equipping clergy with a better understanding of the world of business and the capitalistic economic system in the context of Christianity, enabling them to minister more empathetically to people in business. Benefits of the book: After reading Closing the Sunday - Monday Gap, the reader will possess: 1. the analytical tools for rational thinking about economic issues of particular interest to the church: economic justice, globalization, inflation, poverty, environmental protection, housing, money, and philanthropy; 2. a clearer understanding of the role of the business firm in society and how the behavior of the business firm relates to the values, interests and priorities of the church; 3. insights into the perspectives held by business people to assist them in more effectively applying their faith to their daily lives. The overall purpose of this book is to provide clergy and church professionals with the knowledge and analytical tools of economics and business to enable more effective communication with and counseling to people in business. Overview: The book is divided into the following nine topics designed to discuss both (1) the economic system and (2) the functioning of the business firm, presenting both economic concepts and...
