The larva of Chcerocampa is a large one the ocellated spots are present only in last stage; if so useful, why is this the case?) and its size alone is sufficient to explain the actions of the small birds. In the case of the sparrows at least, almost any strange object of the same size might cause the same reaction. Anything new about their regular haunts is viewed with suspicion. In regard to the Cobra-like appearance of Chrocampa, Poulton says: It is likely that the terrifying appearance of our own larvae probably first arose in the tropics, where the imitated cause of alarm to the enemies of the larvae is real and obvious. And it is probable that the success of the same method in countries where the reptilian fauna cannot be said...
