Brand New Book  Print on Demand .When you think of Earth Day, do you know that the first Earth Day (April 22, 1970) was not the beginning of the environmental movement? the landmark legislation of the 1970s was not the beginning of environmental law? today s most important environmental laws were enacted with a Republican President and Democrats Congress? the Environmental Protection Agency was at first the most popular agency in the federal government? favoring new environmental laws was politically the safest stance? groups as different as the John Birch Society and Students for a Democratic Society agreed on the need to stop pollution? that the idea of Earth Day was modeled after anti-Vietnam War teach-ins? that most of the academics predictions of environmental catastrophe were wrong? that the most vocal environmental activists today are still wrong because they make the same flawed arguments? Before the first Earth Day Earth Day 1970 marks a turning point in history of environmentalism. Scientists began to express concern about atomic testing and massive spraying of pesticides in the 1950s. The public feared the environmental effects of pollution and the safety of food like never before. Rachel Carson s Silent Spring (1962) made scientific knowledge known to the public and galvanized that fear into calls for action. Conservationists once concerned only about wilderness and wildlife preservation became concerned about such a wider range of issues that they started calling themselves environmentalists instead. First Earth Day, 1970 Senator Gaylord Nelson conceived of a national teach-in to put the energy of the antiwar movement to work on environmental issues. He succeeded beyond anyone s wildest expectations. Academics, politicians, business leaders, labor leaders, students, housewives, and school children...
