Excerpt: . . . 11 sults and new opportunities for Americas workers, farmers, ranch-ers, service providers, and consumers. In conclusion, the first 10 years of the WTO have demonstrated why the United States must continue its active participation and leadership role. A turn away from the work of the past six decades, to bring about a rules-based, liberalized global trading system, would bring certain closure of markets to those American workers and farmers dependent on continued trade liberalization and would ignite persistent trade conflicts that would distort the global econ-omy. A world where the United States steps away from rules-based, global trading system would be a world where international trade would be an additional source of strategic conflict rather than serving as a force for cooperation and strengthened ties among countries. We know that the global trading system is not perfect and remains a work in...
